

FIRST EDITION JOHNSON.

He Arrives at Home--His Reception by Old Friends--A Speech by the Ex-President.

"There is Life in Me Yet."

Greenville cor. Knoxville Press and Herald. At half-past 6 A. M. the special train for Greenville left Knoxville amid a drizzling rain, which lasted until shortly after our arrival at the depot...

The rain which had fallen in an incessant drizzle since daylight now ceased. The shrill whistle of the engine of the special train, denoting the coming of the ex-President and his party, created a great excitement...

The ex-President gracefully replied to the compliment, and spent a few minutes chatting with friends. The procession then formed, and the ex-President entering a barouche, the carriage moved to the front of the depot...

Mr. Johnson was introduced by Hon. T. Nelson. Mr. Johnson was presented, he was greeted with deafening cheers.

Ex-President Johnson's Speech at Home. Following his arrival in appearing before you in my absence, the reception and cordial welcome I have received incapsulate me from giving proper expression to my emotions...

He spoke of the time, now far back in the past, when, yet young, he had come to Greenville, spoke of his early trials and sorrows, and of the many friends who were then his.

On returning to their midst, into the ranks of American citizenship, he desired to show his intelligence to bear the bonds now resting upon him.

He declared that for the last four years he had been the greatest slave on the earth. The 4th of March was the day when he was freed.

ness, but purely as a matter of courtesy. General Grant was very pleasant, but he showed me no particular marked attention. As I was about to leave, he called me aside and said: "Mr. Creswell, let me see; what are your initials--J. N., is it not?" "No," said I; "John Andrew Jackson Creswell."

Mr. Creswell was not thoughtful for any position until about the last moment. It was quite evident to me that he was taken from the Southern States. Aware of this fact, the politicians went to work. As name after name was mentioned the war began.
